people can easily remember and associate with your films is a must.

Think big, make it big, and you have more of a chance of making it big. Get it?

The film industry is quite different from other industries in that your first impression on your "customers" are movie trailers and the movies themselves.

Have you ever seen a movie and thought it was decent, but never heard of the production company before? If so, can you recall the company? If not, they either didn't make that great of an impression, of the name was just not catchy. Either case can be lethal to your career as a producer, so read on!

Consider these tips when brainstorming production company names:

• Make sense: Your production company name should correspond with the types of movies you produce. Having a company name that sounds like it should be producing horror films, but produces
